DR. SAMUEL REID SPENCER, JR.:

- - - through his clarity of vision and his practicality of mind, the ideals of Mary Baldwin College are strengthened and her hopes become realities.

In recognition and appreciation of his able and devoted service, his personal concern for the academic community as well as for the individual student, it is eminently fitting that the 1962 BLUESTOCKING be dedicated to this understanding and determined man, the worthy administrator who, through his program of New Directions, has shaped the destiny of Mary Baldwin College.

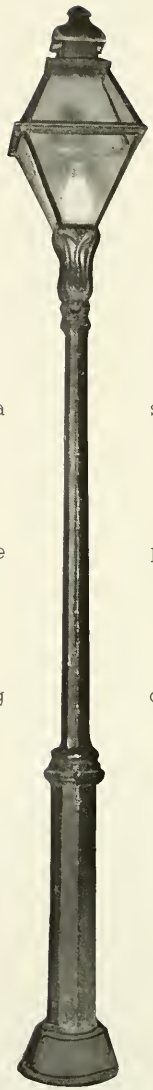
In an era when science and technology are of primary concern for the survival and well-being of mankind, the small liberal arts college is under constant attack from those who emphasize specialization. To meet the challenge of a scientifically oriented world, the liberal arts college must have a well-defined yet flexible policy which it strives to follow. This book is attempting to express the editor's understanding of the purpose of Mary Baldwin College in the hope that these goals may be assimilated and consciously understood by the alumnae, the administration and the student body.



To succeed one must know his direction; and to succeed in education is a primary necessity, for ignorance is a burden modern society cannot afford. With man's future depending on his ability to master his own mind, the cultivation of the skills and techniques that are basic to all human achievement is his only salvation. Mary Baldwin College has accepted the challenge as impressed on her seal: NON PRO TEMPORE SED AETERNITATE — NOT FOR TIME BUT ETERNITY.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

By making known the issues involving the Student Government Association, awareness of the problems confronting campus leaders has led to increased interest in Student Board and its functions.

The chance to practice democratic principles is afforded by the SGA. Discussing proposals to the Advisory Board and airing community problems have led to a more efficient code of living.

VISITING SCHOLARS

Arranged through the University Center in Virginia, the Visiting Scholar program brought to Mary Baldwin an array of informed speakers. The scholars gave public lectures on varied topics of culture and learning and met informally with classes. Dwarka Nath Chatterjee, Deputy High Commissioner for India in Pakistan; Melville Herskovits, authority on anthropology; and Bruce Catton, well-known author and Civil War historian, provided intellectual stimulation and new insight into their particular fields.

CURRENT ISSUES

Each month an outstanding authority on domestic and international problems presented accurate information on issues ranging from Congress and the Supreme Court to lectures on communism and atomic energy. George McGovern and Thomas Roosevelt McKeldin were among the speakers who created concern about such problems. The Current Issues Program with its student discussion group encouraged further study for intelligent participation in civic responsibilities.

ALGERNON SYDNEY SULLIVAN AWARD

In connection with the New York Southern Society, Mary Baldwin College presents at commencement two medallions to those who, because of the quality of their lives, are judged appropriate recipients of this award. Unselfish service is the fundamental principle in respect to the life of Algernon Sydney Sullivan, whose name the award honors.

THE LAUREL SOCIETY

Organized in the spring of 1958, the Laurel Society acknowledges and honors the outstanding student. Leadership, character, scholarship and service are the criteria for membership. To recognize sophomore leaders, the Laurel inaugurated the Campus Guides to escort guests visiting the college. Other projects were entertaining at scholarship weekend and special tables for honor students. New Members were inducted by president Betty Kelley at the March tapping ceremony.

402 WORKSHOP

Living up to the somewhat esoteric name, members of 402 Workshop studied modern authors and trends, at the same time actively thinking, experimenting and writing. Ruthless judgment of their own work in informal sessions with tape recorder and coffee pot was rewarded with honors in intercollegiate competition at the Hollins poetry festival, in a national anthology and by individual satisfaction.

BOARD OF PUBLICATIONS

Realizing the vital role of publications on a college campus, the Board of Publications has continued its endeavor to raise the quality of Mary Baldwin's student publications. Accordingly, this year the Board has emphasized proper long range training of staff members for future positions of responsibility and the need for cooperation within and between the staffs of the three publications.

BLUESTOCKING

Providing a tangible assimilation of Mary Baldwin of the past, the present and the future, the Bluestocking is a permanent, representative and pictorial record of the college.

The new Mary Baldwin deserves a new Bluestocking with a fresh layout, unique photography and a thought provoking theme. Integrating within this book the aims of a liberal arts college, these changes bring alive the woman of the twentieth century and her education.

Mr. Gentry's magic camera winning a first place award in the open division of the Virginia Photographer's Association for the feature picture on page 82, lifted the spirits of a tired staff after a hectic week before exams. With the petty antagonisms, disappointments, pressure and worry forgotten in the excitement of getting the book to press, the editor and staff remember the spirit of working together in capturing a vital and meaningful year.

The Bluestocking is a member of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association and the Associated Collegiate Press which awarded first class honor rating to the 1960-61 book.

MISCELLANY

Creativity and originality are the concerns of Mary Baldwin's literary magazine, the Miscellany. Exposing students' deepest thoughts while providing the thrill of seeing one's name in print, it has encompassed an abundance of fresh talent, yet maintained high standards of quality. KING SERIES

Cultural events are an integral part of the total college program. The King Series of concerts, lectures and theatrical performances introduced accomplished artists to the college and the community. Widening student knowledge and appreciation of the arts were such well-known musical groups as the Alberneri Trio, the National Gallery Orchestra and the Netherlands Chamber Choir. FRESHMAN CLASS

"Sound the bugles loud and clear, the class of '65 is here." A maze of new faces, mostly feminine, but who would ever think that being with just girls could be so much fun. After a week of orientation "beat" freshmen turn in finally, too tired for homesickness, with name tags, new wardrobes, friendly roommates and "big sisters" whirling them to sleep.

"Don't look for more, we're the class of '64." No longer considered "frantic freshmen" they give themselves the title of "sophisticated sophomores." As members of the upperclass realm they serve as "big sisters" and campus guides, acquiring a new feeling of responsibility toward themselves and the college.

JUNIOR CLASS

"Mary Baldwin look and see we're the Class of '63." With Independent Reading over and just one more year to go, class rings are flashed in sophomore faces and envy felt for the glory of the seniors. As serious study and selective work are begun, juniors begin to realize the importance of an education.

SENIOR CLASS

"We're the class of '62, beauty, brains and talent too." Dr. Taylor's whistle and a "no chewing gum ultimatum" characterize the arrival of a new senior class, as caps and gowns fail to disguise mischievous minds at work. Diploma in hand, they leave to face new responsibilities carrying the undefinable Mary Baldwin "spirit" with the knowledge that they are well-educated women.

Plant we the ivy . . . practice teaching . . . final exams and comprehensives . . . Boston and job applications . . . Pomp and Circumstance . . . tassles in our eyes and lumps in our throats . . . what am I to be?

RECREATION ASSOCIATION

Campus-wide activities to promote good sportsmanship, to develop an active interest in sports and to establish a close unity between faculty and students were planned by the Recreation Association. The faculty's interpretation of an eight-thirty class at the first Scotch-Irish party added to the festive spirit. Whether in competitive sports or on a picnic, a retreat at Chip Inn or a pep rally, the emphasis was on fun and relaxation.

Bonfires, coathangers, marshmallows . . . bungled basketball and startled officials . . . the Skyscrapers . . . Rec of the Week . . . prizes and awards . . . go out for sports and keep fit!

SCOTCH CLAN

"We're Scotch born, and Scotch bred, and when we die we'll be Scotch dead . . ." Clan leader Melissa Evans, in her kilt and tam, has led the Scotch clan in one of its most glorious years. From the time that bids were distributed around the big bonfire in the fall, clan spirit and enthusiasm were high. Winners in the Scotch-Irish basketball game, the bridge tournament and the vollyball game, the Scotch all agree that '62 was a "bonnie" good year.

IRISH CLAN

"The Irish are the best" is still the contention of the Irish clan. Whenever clan leader Ingrid Carlson donned her green hat with the l-o-n-g feather, there was sure to be Scotch-Irish competition. The annual hockey game was not played because of uncooperative weather, but scheduled in its place was a basketball game. The Irish hoped to put the "Scotch on the rocks" at the clan against clan baseball game in the spring. Having the luck and spirit of the Irish, they are looking forward to revenge next fall.

For Mary Baldwin's mermaids there is the Dolphins Club, a syncronized swimming group of approximately twenty girls. Chosen on the basis of fall tryouts, the members work toward the presentation of their annual winter aqua pageant. Depicting the wiles and ways of the feminine sex was the 1962 pageant, "Les Girls."

ETA BETA PI

Cheery yellow aprons characterize the twenty-eight scurrying girls who comprise Mary Baldwin's only sorority on campus. Serving up tempting dishes of "train wreck," "mystery meat" and "eggs marigold," they weathered the storm of complaining students whose boarding house reach allowed them to get that second helping.

Betty Kelley and her assistant Ann Delk served as official dining room hostesses to assure smooth functioning of all facilities.

Condensed from an address given for Opening Convocation and Founders' Day, 1961, by Samuel R. Spencer, Jr., President.

LIBERAL EDUCATION AND OUR TIMES

A year or so ago in this auditorium, we had a panel discussion designed to inform underclassmen about the value of majors in certain departments. When questions were invited from the floor, a student rose and asked, "What good will a major in English do you?"

This was a legitimate question. In broader terms it is a question that every one of you has a right to ask. What good is the kind of education you are getting here at Mary Baldwin College?

Not only do you have a right to ask it — you ought to ask it, and you ought to know the answers. After all, you are investing four years of your life to get it, and your parents are investing $10,000. Furthermore, you have chosen this kind of education instead of one which would seem at first glance to be more lucrative and possibly more directly related to life beyond school and college years. For example, since most of you will eventually take a turn at being housewives, why aren't you spending your time learning to cook and to sew, and to manage family budgets, and to decorate your homes? Why aren't you spending your time learning typing and shorthand, which you can exchange readily for money? Why aren't you learning to be an airline stewardess or a commercial photographer? A liberal arts education will not teach you any of these things. What good is it?

I believe I could give you a plausible answer to this question in several ways. I believe I could show you that it has a direct practical application to what you will do and that it will help you to be a better wife and mother, if this turns out to be your chief vocation, or to earn a living, as about half the women in this country do for at least part of their lives. I could show you that the kind of education you receive here will enrich your personal life, if you will let it, whatever you may do.

But I want to answer this question in another way today. I want to say why I believe this kind of education to which you are committed has a special relevance to our times, why it is more important than ever that we seed society with persons of your ability and intelligence who have been educated in the liberal tradition. . . .

Under [today's] circumstances [when we are dangerously close to having to defend principle in an active conflict], it is obviously important that we understand the significance of principles and know what principles we are undertaking to defend. Liberal education comes to the rescue here precisely because it exalts not techniques but principles. In this kind of education, we are searching out the constants in the human equation, the characteristics which resist mutation from one generation to another, the universal stimuli to human action. And in learning these things, we sift out for ourselves principles on which to base our lives.

To be more specific, the kind of education to which you have committed yourself is important to you and to your world because it offers antidotes to the most serious poisons of our time.

In the first place, liberal education will help because it will develop in you what Dr. Patterson Wardlaw, for many years a molder of educational opinion at the University of South Carolina, called "a loyalty to facts." Such loyalty has special significance in this era of the big lie. . . .

Today we find complete disregard of truth in the leaders of the communist bloc. The Soviets have even set about to re-write history-not merely the interpretations of history, which constantly change with advances in scholarship, but the accepted facts of history as well. For example, we are astonished to learn that we have been wrong all along about many inventions and discoveries, which the Soviets now tell us were made by Russians.

How does liberal education act as an antidote to the big lie? It teaches you to search out truth, to sift evidence, to weigh one bit of testimony against another, and finally to determine what Dr. Wardlaw called "the real facts and the whole of the facts." All of the people can be fooled some of the time, but it is much harder to fool the liberally educated person.

Further than this, [a liberal education] will develop in you a dissatisfaction with half-truth, with vague and fuzzy meanings, with impercision and inaccuracy, so that you may winnow out this chaff and leave the solid grain of fact. In other words, it makes you competent to form judgements on questions that are important to us all.

In the second place, at a time when freedom is a qualified term in much of our world, liberal education will inculcate in you a feeling for freedom.

In January 1941, as the United States moved nearer the whirlpool of war, Franklin Roosevelt proclaimed as foundation stones of United States policy the Four Freedoms: freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want and freedom from fear. Today he might well have added another: the freedom to know.

Not only are the citizens of the iron curtain countries unable to express themselves freely; they are not even trusted to know the truth. What they are allowed to know is spoon-fed in selected portions at selected times.

Such restrictions on the freedom of ideas is anathema to liberal education. By very definition, liberal education exalts freedom of inquiry. Once habituated to this principle of free inquiry, the liberally educated person will not be satisfied with bolted doors or barbed wire fences in the realm of the mind. Furthermore, this feeling for freedom which liberal education develops in the individual spills over into many areas, making the liberally educated person dissatisfied with any shackle or fetter which restricts the flight of the human spirit.

This term, the human spirit, leads me to a third reason why a liberal education is specially relevant today. In an era when we have witnessed a terrible and conscious degrading of men and women on a vast scale, liberal education develops in you a high regard for human beings. . . .

Disregard of human beings has become so commonplace that what shocked us once now causes only a shrug of our shoulders. The ruthless crushing of the Hungarian revolt, medieval tortures and the twentieth century brainwashing techniques prove that the Russians have no more regard for human beings than the Nazis had.

The liberally educated person recoils at subjugation of human individuality and personality. The education you receive here will give you an insight into man at his worst and at his best. But on balance, it is bound to create in you an unwillingness to see these potentialities stifled or wasted. It should create in you a concern for your fellow man which will make you outraged at anything less than decent treatment of another human being. At this point in history, when we seem on the brink of a cataclysmic breakdown in human relationships, could there be any greater need than for this kind of concern?

Let me point out here that the Christian faith which ideally permeates our life at this college reinforces all of the principles I have mentioned. . . .

One word lest we become self-satisfied in the complacent conviction that our own righteousness, rather than the ideals to which we are committed, represents the hope of the world. Not all the poisons for which liberal education can be an antidote are to be found on the far side of the oceans which surround us.

Here at home we have all too often been inconstant lovers of truth. Careless inaccuracy and conscious distortion greet us on every other printed page. In our personal lives we are often ready to use the half truth when it suits our purpose. In such incidents as those involving the U-2 flights and the Cuban fiasco, our government officially lied, misleading us as well as the rest of the world. Furthermore, our feeling for freedom at home is not yet strong enough. Freedom is not complete so long as the rights and privileges of a free society do not belong to every citizen. We are still not free when we allow ourselves to remain shackled by ignorance and prejudice.

Nor do we hesitate at times to run rough-shod over other human beings. In some of our cities, men have been killed for the thrill of it, and in others mob violence and brutality have gone unrebuked. Too often men in this country live in fear of reprisal and feel themselves no better than pawns of economic forces on both sides of the labor-management struggle.

Even if there were no international crisis, even if there were no ideological challenge to our democratic ideals, there would be a crying need for persons devoted to the principles which a liberal education exalts. Only by a sincere and constant attempt to clean house in our own nation can we justify our claim to moral leadership on the world stage.

I hope that what I have said today has not been pitched in such cosmic terms as to seem irrelevant to your life as an individual. It does seem to me important that all of us try to see the relationship of what we are doing in our own small college to the great events of our time, especially since we seem individually to have little effect upon them. In other words, I want you to realize that you do not have to justify your kind of education in utilitarian terms. If anyone asks you what good your education is, tell him you are learning to make a living, in a certain sense, if you want to, for this kind of education does have a practical value. But also tell him that you are developing principles to live by. If you succeed in developing these principles — and you must work at it to succeed — you and others like you who are being educated in the liberal tradition will have a constructive and badly needed influence on the life of your time.

More than the academic . . .

Education is

which inspires the young woman to find self-expression—not only in life but in living.

PHILOSOPHY OF YOUTH

How am I to be

If I'm not master of me?

How it softens a path of broken glass,

How it eases the pain of going lame,

To know it is I who got me there,

And I who buy round trips for every fare.
